Created by Vancouver actor, singer, and playwright Meghan Gardiner and award-winning filmmaker Michelle Porter in 2009, the film version of Dissolve is based on Meghan Gardiner's one-woman play of the same name. It shares the real stories of several women who, despite different situations and circumstances, were all the target of drug-facilitated sexual assaults.

With the tag line, "awareness is the first step towards prevention", Dissolve seeks to inform its audience about the risks that are out there, with the message that knowledge is crucial not only to prevention, but also to healing. It offers information about what women need to know to make themselves less vulnerable to this premeditated crime and encourages them to seek support.
